We ask that Congress increase CCDBG funding by an additional $5 billion in FY2020, in order to help states meet the 2014 requirements and increase the number of children served by the grant.

THE HISTORY OF CCDBG

Established in 1991, the Child Care and Development Block Grant (CCDBG) is the primary federal grant program that provides child care assistance for families in need. CCDBG is administered to states in block grants. States use the program to subsidize child care for working families with low incomes. Most of this assistance is administered through vouchers or certificates, which can be used by parents to select the quality provider or program that works best for their family.

Congress reauthorized CCDBG in 2014 with overwhelming bipartisan support. The CCDBG Act of 2014 improved child care health and safety standards and provided funding to help make quality child care available to more families with low incomes. The 2014 law also mandated that states meet new requirements on comprehensive criminal background checks and disaster preparedness and response planning, among other critical improvements.

A JOB NOT FINISHED

Despite the reauthorization, Congress failed to provide sufficient funding to help states make quality child care available to millions of families that need it. Today, states use resources from other federal funding streams, including Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF), to ensure families don’t lose critical access to child care.

The lack of adequate funding has hampered states’ ability to provide quality child care to working families. Currently, only 1 in 6 families who qualify for child care assistance receive it.

States continue to request and receive waivers from the Administration for Children and Families (ACF) to delay implementation of the new requirements, particularly background checks. Additionally, FY2017 saw the lowest number of children served by the grant in nearly 20 years.

WHY CCDBG MATTERS IN NEW MEXICO

Earlier this year, New Mexico Governor Michelle Lujan Grisham signed Senate Bill 22, which will bring all early childhood programs under its own agency, the Early Childhood Education and Care Department, within the next year. This means strong coordination with clear and focused leadership between all programs that govern services for children ages 0 to 5.

While this new agency will be imperative in coordinating services, New Mexico will be utilizing the federal Preschool Development Grant to conduct a comprehensive needs analysis utilizing data from the Early Childhood Integrated Data System (ECIDS) as well as qualitative data gathered through public forums across the state. Increased CCDBG funding could help New Mexico expand this needs analysis in order to better understand the state's child care and early education landscape. This assessment will drive the creation of a 3-year roadmap to continue the development of a high-quality early learning system, including continuing to work towards recruiting and retaining quality providers. All of our efforts in New Mexico are family-centered, with an emphasis on access, equity, respect, and informed choice for all of our diverse community needs.

HOW CONGRESS CAN HELP IN 2019

CCDBG remains underfunded, despite the funding increase in FY 2018 of $2.4 billion. While this funding allowed states to begin the intense work of revising their child care systems to help thousands of children and families gain access to high-quality care, it did not fully meet the critical need for high-quality child care.

In fact, even with CCDBG’s historic increase, federal funding for child care is still $1 billion less than FY2001 levels, when adjusted for inflation.

Given the population growth since 2001, it is clear that states still do not have enough funding to meet the needs of families.

For this reason, we ask that Congress increase CCDBG funding by an additional $5 billion in FY2020. This will help states meet the 2014 requirements and increase the number of children served.
